You're Invited To The Banquet!

Deacon Thien Bui

The readings for the 28th Sunday in Ordinary Time wrap us in the beautiful, comforting imagery of a great banquet. In the First Reading from Isaiah, we are promised a heavenly feast prepared by the Lord, where hunger is satisfied, tears are wiped away, and death is destroyed forever. This rich, eternal feast is echoed in the Gospel, where Jesus tells the parable of a king who throws a spectacular wedding banquet for his son.

The primary lesson for us this week is that God is the grand host, and we are all invited. The king's servants go out to the main crossroads, gathering everyone they can find, "bad and good alike" to fill the wedding hall. God's grace and mercy are completely free, universal, and extravagant. However, the parable also leaves us with a challenging truth: while the invitation is open to all, we must actively choose to show up and change our hearts to match the dignity of the feast.

In the Gospel, the king notices a guest who isn't wearing a wedding garment and has him cast out. In the ancient world, hosts often provided clean garments for their guests. To refuse the garment was a sign of disrespect.

For us today, the wedding garment represents our active conversion, our faith, baptismal grace, and deeds of love. It is not enough to just sit in the pews; we must intentionally clothe ourselves in Christ's love, mercy, and justice and routinely act on them. We can definitely act on them by sharing our time, talents, and treasures. We can commit time to come worship or volunteer at the parish. We can commit our talents to helping those around us in need by doing a little extra. And we can offer our treasures to ensure the next generation will carry on the traditions of our faith. Whatever and however you decide, may the Holy Spirit, our Blessed Mother, all the angels and saints lead and watch over you along the way to the Heavenly Banquet.
